Max Thompson : The Psychokitty Speaks Out: Something of Yours Will Meet a Toothy Death before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Psychokitty Speaks Out: Something of Yours Will Meet a Toothy Death:

Sometimes Max does things just to annoy his "People" - the Woman, the Man, and the Young Human. He finds annoying his People very entertaining. He does nice things, too, like using his fine singing voice at 3 a.m. This book is written in blog/diary format and has no plot. This makes it good for reading when you only have a few minutes here and there. You can read an "entry" or two and pick it up later as time allows. It's good when you need a laugh and only have a couple minutes. There are some typos and formatting issues. Although there is no profanity, there is language that is better described as "potty mouth" - not quite profanity but not clean either. If the author had left out "those" words, this would be a great book for kids. As an adult, you'll find Max and his blogs entertaining. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Max rides again. This cat is the Meow! By Lynn Ward I love all three of the Max Thompson books. Max is a cool cat who knows what he wants in a person and doesn't hesitate to tell you, or in his case threaten you, so that he gets what he wants. He wants the bed, but only after the person has warmed it up for him, treats and most of all his canned food which he calls Stinky Goodness. Believe me I know. Cat food stinks. Max is always telling other cats that if his person doesn't do what he wants "Something of Yours Will Meet a toothy Death" or he will poop on your pillow. Still he can be funny and sweet. I recommend this book and the 2 others also. They should be published as one. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. A no holes barred look into a year in the life of Max By Andy1965 Max does an excellent job of sharing a glimpse into a year of his life and those people and other animals around him, His no holes barred description of what happens to him is outstanding, I really enjoyed reading this book, it's broken down into a diary type format, so I would read a few pages a day, It has made me often wonder what my own cats would say if they wrote their own books.

Look. I'm funny. You like me. And if you buy my book, I earn cash towards fresh cat nip and crunchy treats. It's as simple as that... But if you need more: This is the diary of Max Thompson, blogger extraordinaire. Thousands of people (maybe hundreds) flock to his blog every day to be amused and enlightened by his feline wisdom. Plus, it's the follow up to "The Psychokitty Speaks Out: Diary of a Mad Housecat" so you know it's good. Some people even thought it was FUNNIER. But you don't have to read that one first. Oh, and I have a potty mouth. So you're warned.
